REPORT

Reading is the major parameter that leads to research. The base of human thinking and development of human life depended upon the knowledge that persons gained through reading. Reading is the main exposure through which people differentiate the positive and negative vibes of human life. To cultivate the habit of ideas for content analysis a seminar on ‘Reading Content Analysis and Methodology’ was conducted in the Department of History on 22/02/2022 at GN 44. It was organised for nurturing the reading habits of students as a part of Project preparation. The event helped both the PG and UG students on realising how to approach the books and how to prepare content analysis. They also understood the basic concepts of methodology part. Most of the students shared their experiences on book reading. They tried to review the books that they already read.
